

Political Process

As I see it the people who are ex bureaucrats that run for public office are always going to align themselves with the bureaucracy, the business community and the Australian people come a poor second in the race, the bureaucrats are determined to run this country and for that reason they have taken over the government process, this is happening on both sides of politics and we will find it hard to reverse the process.

Blind Freddie can see that every time the business community try to highlight the shortcomings of any government departments the Government is right there to defend and deny any inefficiencies by its 'friends' it's sad and strange how we the people are always wrong, we now have government for the bureaucracy, not government for the people.

Having said the above I will now be accused of having a 'Political Agenda' or I will be told that as an association we have to remain non-political, well too bad, everything happening to this industry at the moment is political and there is no escaping that fact, the sooner we all become politically involved the better, otherwise we will continue to be crushed by the sheer weight of government.
